ASKS ENLARGEMENT OF TREATY POWERS

Provision in Underwood Bil Would Empower Houses of Congress to Act.

To empower both houses of Congress, by a majority vote, to ratify reciprocity and trade agreements with foreign nations is the revolutionary proposal of the section substituted in the Underwood bill for the present maximum and minimum tariff law. The provision would sweep away the exclusive Senatorial privilege to ratify such treaties by a two-thirds vote. "This legislation," the committee says in its analysis of the bill, "is new and somewhat along the same lines that were authorized under the Dingley tariff law, the difference being that the reciprocity treaties were required to be ratified by a two-thirds tote of the Senate, whereas the trade agreements now provided for will only require a majority vote of both houses. As the Senate is not directly representative of the majority of the people of the United States, it is deemed more in accord with the progressive tendencies of our people that such agreements should be rati-fied, as far as possible, by the repre-sentatives of a majority of the Amer-

This new proposal takes the place of the maximum and minimum sections of the existing law, which the committee declares "have not been productive of any effective expansion of our foreign

"Under the present law," the committee says, "the imports from the United States to the Philippine islands and from the Philippine islands to the United States are limited to articles the growth or manufacture of the two countries, except that articles the product of the Philippine islands which do not contain foreign materials to the uct of the Philippine islands which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 20 per cent were admitted free of duty. At the suggestion of the War Department, the per cent of foreign material that may be contained in these articles admitted free of duty has been increased from 20 to 50 per cent, to encourage the development of certain lines or manufacture in the Philippine islands, notably handmade lace made by the native women of the islands."
